

I have known Connor since he was 10 years old and have watched him develop into a fine young man, who not only excels on the baseball field but in the classroom as well. As an athlete, I have always been impressed with Connor's leadership ability, his willingness to help his teammates and his work ethic. Connor has put in countless hours of work on his craft and will continue to work hard to push his development to accomplish his ultimate goal.

Connor comes from a great family that has instilled solid core values and these values are evident in every interaction with him.

As an Ex MLB player, it is rare to come across a young man like Connor, who exhibits everything that is right in the game. It's been my honor to be a small part of this young mans journey to play college baseball and more.
